A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on April 9, 2009 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kamiya et al (EP 1082907) for the reasons set forth in rejecting the claim in the last Office action.

Kamiya et al teach a milk product comprising a milk product that has been heat treated and has a dissolved oxygen concentration of 2 ppm or less (see entire document, especially claims 1, 2, and 4).

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5, 7-9, and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kamiya et al (EP 1082907).

Kamiya et al disclose a process for treating milk and milk products comprising decreasing the dissolved oxygen concentration by treatment with nitrogen gas to reduce the dissolved oxygen concentration to 2 ppm or less and heat treating to sterilize as is claimed (see entire document, especially claims 1, 2, and 4). Kamiya et al disclose a first heat treatment at 80-90°C and a second heat treatment at 130°C (see Example 1).

The claims differ as to the specific recitation of heat treatment prior to decreasing the oxygen content.

In the absence of a showing to the contrary, the time in which the product is heat treated is merely a matter of choice and well-with the skill of the art. Applicant attaches no criticality to the heat step and at most it appears to be no more than conventional.

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to heat treat prior to nitrogen treatment as the time of heat treatment is conventional and well-within the skill of the art. Applicant is using known components and process steps for their art-recognized function to obtain no more than expected results.

Applicant's arguments filed April 9, 2009 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Kamiya et al does not teach two heat treatments or improved storage

Art Unit: 1794

Kamiya et al teach a first heat treatment at 80-90°C and a second heat treatment at 130°C (see Example 1). Applicant does not claim improved storage. As claimed, the invention does not define over that of the prior art.
